

HELPING YOU BUY RESPONSIBLY – PALM OIL FREE ALTERNATIVES

* The following list is not all inclusive and there may well be other products in the categories covered which are palm oil free – if you know of any, please send details through to us at contact@orangutans.com.au

* Where labelling is not definitive, we have attempted to confirm the information in this list through letters from our supporters to the manufacturers.

* Nearly all Australian manufacturers contacted informed us that where products did contain palm oil, it was from sustainable sources. This is a good start, but membership of the Roundtable on Sustainable Palm Oil (www.rspo.org) is insufficient to guarantee that the palm oil is sustainable. Only a limited number of members are currently producing certified sustainable palm oil.

* Product specifications can change – the information in this list is believed to be correct at the time of publication.

* The list is based on a product by product basis rather than an company level. Many of the companies listed manufacture other products that do contain palm oil.

Marathon Foods	Marathon	Dim sim range; Beef & chicken bites; Spring roll range
Wesfarmers Ltd	Coles	Mini dim sims

Most pizza products we looked at contained vegetable oil and in many cases E471 as an emulsifier. McCain has responded that palm oil is not used in the preparation of its pizzas so we assume that the vegetable oil listed as an ingredient in its products is not palm oil.

Steggles has informed us that it uses cottonseed and canola as its frying and general food oil. While not specified in its formulations, Steggles advises that its suppliers may use emulsifiers including E471 at very low levels which don't require labelling.

FROZEN MEALS &amp; FISH

Sanitarium	Vegie Delight	Chilled and frozen vegetarian range
Select Brands Pty Ltd	Michelina's	Beef ravioli
Simplot Australia	Birds Eye	All frozen fish products

McCain Foods has informed us that it does not use palm oil in its frozen dinners.

Nestle (Lean Cuisine, Maggi) has indicated that palm oil is not an ingredient in the majority of its frozen meals but has not been able to be more specific. We've put together a list of those products which don't have vegetable oil listed as an ingredient - not a guarantee but the best we can do with the information we have.

Sanitarium	Sanitarium	Peanut butters & marmite
Trialia Foods	Eskal Freenut butter	Smooth & crunchy peanut butter

Goodman Fielder and Unilever, the two major producers of spreads in Australia, have confirmed that all their spreads contain a percentage of palm oil. Fonterra has also confirmed that its Western Star spread range may contain palm oil.

Nuttelelex's main ingredient is sunflower oil but it does also contain a small amount of palm oil.

Alfa rice bran spread is palm oil free using rice bran oil and a sunflower based emulsifier.

Some peanut butters appear to contain palm oil. Apparently the peanut oil is extracted to sell separately and replaced in the peanut butter by cheaper palm oil. We have confirmed however that the Sanitarium range contains rapeseed oil or is 100% peanuts as are Ceres Organic and the Melrose Health spreads.

So, it's back to butter or the listed products above which we believe are palm oil free.
